

A Message From The Fat Cats Protection League

*Gordon Brown,
Chairman F.C.P.L.*

"We all know that it is so easy for hard times to suddenly transform our lives for the worse in an amazingly short period of time.

It is so easy to go from well-being to poverty in the blink of an eye.

That is why I can justify you all giving so generously to the Fat Cats Protection League.

These poor creatures had seen their cosy world collapse around them, and it was obvious that only a vast donation of public cash could help them out of the desperate predicament that they had got themselves into, that it was the only way to relieve their obvious distress.

Only this huge injection of taxpayers' cash could help them retain their lavish lifestyles and ludicrous bonuses, only this could end the misery and torture that these poor creatures were suffering.

Sadly, we weren't able to save all these poor fat cats. Indeed, Fat Freddie from RBS had gorged himself so much in recent years that he was unable to wriggle out of the hole that he had got himself stuck in, so gross had he become.

Treasurer, F.C.P.L.*

However, a pension of £590,000 a year should make a comfortable cushion for this fat little pussycat to land on and I'm sure his pals will find some well-paid job for him.

So, we'd just like to thank you once again for the many billions of pounds you so generously donated to save our fat cats.

Now that they are mostly safe and well, we can get back to our real business, like cutting incapacity benefit and forcing the sick into low-paid jobs or telling ordinary working people that they are being greedy for asking for wage rises in line with inflation.

Once again, we at the Fat Cats Protection League thank you from the bottom of your wallets."
